R. B. HAYES IS DEAD.

The Ex-President Called to His Eternal Home.

DEATH'S SUDDEN SUMMONS.

He Was Attacked with Neuralgia of the Heart While in Cleveland on Saturday and Compelled to Return Home at Once, Where He Was Confined to His Bed Until Tuesday Night at 11 O'Clock When Death Ended His Earthly Career. Biographical Sketch of His Eventful Life.

FREMONT, O., Jan. 18.—Ex-President Rutherford B. Hayes died at 11 o'clock last night. Early in the evening an inquiry elicited the response that the general had passed a fairly well day and was resting nicely in the evening. The change from better to worse was rapid, and at 11 o'clock the distinguished ex-president passed away.

The first intelligence of this was received when Webb C. Hayes came down town and quietly announced that his father had just died.

Ex-President Hayes was brought here last Saturday suffering from an attack of rheumatism of the heart with which he had been stricken at Cleveland. It was the second attack of the kind he had received within two weeks and, although his condition was regarded as somewhat serious and excited alarm of his family, the encouragement given them by Dr. Hilbert, the family physician, led them to believe that the patient would soon recover.

For this reason all knowledge of the ex-president's illness was kept from the public, and the fact that he was suffering from heart trouble did not become known until Monday afternoon. While Dr. Hilbert remained almost constantly at the distinguished patient's bedside, no alarming symptoms appeared until yesterday evening, when he became rapidly worse, and died at 11 o'clock.

Ex-President Hayes left home last Monday on a trip to Columbus, Buffalo and Cleveland. At the last named place he spent a few days with his son, Webb C. Hayes.

During the month the ex-president had complained of one or two slight attacks of neuralgia of the heart, but as it soon passed away, he thought nothing of it. On Saturday he experienced a severe recurrence of the malady, but being prepared for his return home, proceeded on his journey, accompanied by his son Webb.

Biography of His Life.

After his retirement from the White House March 4, 1881, ex-President Rutherford B. Hayes was heard of but seldom. Occasionally he attended a Grand Army reunion, and he was a prominent figure at the Columbian celebration and banquet in New York city Oct. 12-14, 1892. He was always present at the annual meetings of the board of trustees of the Peabody fund, of which all ex-presidents are members. But beyond these modest functions Mr. Hayes remained in absolute retirement at his home in Fremont, O., up to the time of his death. Mr. Hayes' career furnishes one of the most interesting chapters in the political history of the United States.

RUTHERFORD B. HAYES.

He was born in Delaware, O., Oct. 4, 1822, his father having died the preceding July. He was graduated with honor from Kenyon college, Ohio, in August, 1842, attended Harvard law school for a little over a year, and was admitted to the bar in 1845. In November, 1848, his health being somewhat impaired, he went to Texas for the winter, and after a period of unsettlement located in Cincinnati the next winter,

In civil cases his practice was not very large, but he won considerable reputation as a prosecutor in criminal cases and gained the friendship of such men as Salmon P. Chase, Thomas Ewing, Thomas Corwin, Moncure D. Conway and Stanley Matthews.

And here is found the first evidences of the greatest peculiarity of the man. During all the years he was in Cincinnati no one seems to have taken a deep interest in him, and when he became a subject of national inquiry Cincinnati could furnish no reminiscences of him. The general expression of the old citizen was, "Yes, he was a city solicitor, and I knew him, but that's all." He was quiet, studious and rather reticent. He did not, says one who knew him, "talk about a matter and arrive at conclusions. When the company had talked for an hour he would suddenly break out with a statement, and that was his final judgment on the matter. If we had been asked to pick the future president out of all the young professionals of Cincinnati, not one of us would have named Mr. Hayes."

It may also be added that of all the stories told about the boyhood of great men and the predictions as to their future not one is told of the boy Hayes. He grew like a hardy apple of the far north, a gentleman or a russet, ripening with extreme deliberation.

LUCY WEBB HAYES.

On Dec. 30, 1852, he married Miss Lucy Ware Webb, daughter of Dr. James Webb, a physician of high social standing in Chillicothe. Of their eight children four sons and one daughter reached maturity. Mrs. Hayes was noted for her devotion to sick and wounded soldiers during the war, and to temperance and public charities in peace. Her refusal to have wine served in the White House during her sway there gave her a world wide fame, and for that action she received many testimonials of esteem both in Europe and America.

Under the first call for troops by President Lincoln the literary club of which Mr. Hayes was a member organized a company, and he was elected captain, and on the 7th of June following the governor of Ohio commissioned him major of the Twenty-third regiment Ohio infantry.

It is both amusing and instructive to go over the roll of this regiment and note how many future great men were concealed in it under such modest titles as Colonels W. S. Rosecrans and James M. Comlay, Lieutenant Colonel Stanley Matthews, Lieutenant William McKinley, Jr., and others. Here, too, we find evidence that though Major Hayes had been reticent in conversation he had acquired quite a reputation as a speaker, for it was largely on account of his ability as an orator in rousing popular patriotism that he received his commission.

At this late day, too, one can afford to smile at the wild confusion of the times—recruits pouring into Columbus ten times as fast as tents could be provided, the raw adjutant general "lying about like a suddenly beheaded hen" and everybody bairing Governor Dennison, who frankly confessed that he "did not know a field officer from a grand marshal," and handed over all his military power to the suddenly created major general, George B. McClellan. Suffice it that Major Hayes' regiment got into West Virginia in July and did splendid service there.

He was judge advocate for a short time, was commissioned lieutenant colonel Oct. 24, 1861, and greatly distinguished himself at the battle of South Mountain, Oct. 14, 1862, where he was severely wounded. Soon after he became a colonel of the regiment, and as such particularly distinguished himself in many movements and battles. He led a desperate charge on Cloyd mountain, and at the first battle of Winchester won the applause of the whole army. But it was at the second battle of Winchester, Sept. 19, 1864, that he won immortal honors.

There he led an assault across a morass, and his horse having mired he charged on foot, and though but forty or fifty men followed so close as to keep up with him this squad captured a battery which had been deemed perfectly secure. Again at Fisher's Hill and Cedar Creek he performed prodigies of valor. His commission as brigadier general soon arrived, and on March 18, 1865, he was made brevet brigadier general "for gallant and distinguished services." In the meantime he had been elected to congress from a Cincinnati district.

It was on this occasion that he made his famous return. A friend having written to him to come home in the fall of 1864 and canvass the district, he answered with a rather sharp reproof, ending with this sentence: "An officer fit for duty who, at this crisis, would abandon his post to electioneer for a seat in congress ought to be scalped." He was re-elected in 1866, but his two terms in congress were uneventful. He voted with his party throughout, except on some minor resolutions on finance. In view of his subsequent prominence as a "prompt resumptionist" it is rather singular that these votes indicated an opposition to strong measures leading toward resumption.

In 1867 he was nominated by the Republicans for governor of Ohio and was elected. No election of that era excited more astonishment. The state had long been overwhelmingly Republican, the majorities ranging above 40,000 for some years, yet at the first election after the soldiers came home, with a phenomenally large vote, the highly honored general had less than 3,000 majority over Allen G. Thurman, and the legislature was carried by the Democrats. That body chose Judge Thurman for the United States senate.

Governor Hayes was re-elected in 1869, this time by over 7,000 majority. He had now become the exponent of advanced "hard money" views, and on the platform of prompt resumption he made his third campaign for governor in 1875, receiving about 5,500 majority after a campaign of almost unprecedented vigor on both sides. In the meantime he had run for congress in 1872 and been defeated by some 1,500 majority, and had in 1873 retired from public life and settled at Fremont, O.

Soon after he came into possession of the large estate of his uncle, Silas Birchard, which further confirmed him in his resolution to lead a private life, and he only yielded in 1875 to the most earnest solicitation of the Republicans.

Of his presidential campaign in 1876 little need be said. His usual "luck of getting there by very narrow margins" followed him. In financial affairs his administration was an unequalled success. It was his good fortune to become president just at the time when the panic and depression were giving way to "better times." Seven years of unexampled deficit in the crops of western Europe and equally unexampled good crops in the United States made the resumption of specie payments possible. The exports of grain in one year of his administration exceeded the ten year average before the war, and one year's imports of gold were greater than all previous gold imports since the administration of James K. Polk.

The experts of wheat alone for the ten years terminating with June, 1881 (only four months after President Hayes retired), exceeded all preceding wheat exports since the country was settled. Providence had indeed come to the aid of the country, and President Hayes and his able finance minister, John Sherman, had the nerve to seize the opportunity.

Mrs. Hayes died in Fremont in 1889. On the day of her funeral thousands of persons, many of them in the humbler walks of life, came from the surrounding country to pay the last tribute of respect to her who had been so universally beloved. From early morning until the hour set for the obsequies an unending stream of visitors poured in through the front door of the home to take a farewell look at the face of the benevolent but decided woman who had passed away.

The death of Mrs. Hayes was a sad blow to the ex-president. He, more than the average man, valued the advice and respected the judgment of his wife, but he accepted the blow without murmuring and resignedly resumed the even tenor of his life.

Mr. Hayes was a man of great benevolence, but he was so unostentatious in dispensing charity that few persons, except the beneficiaries, ever knew of his good deeds.

EX-PRESIDENT HAYES' HOME AT FREMONT.

His home on the outskirts of Fremont is known as Spiegel Grove, and here for many years there has been dispensed a hospitality which, while almost prodigal in its generosity, was never obtrusive or showy. Spiegel Grove was inherited from Mr. Hayes' wealthy uncle, Mr. Birchard, and was the typical home of a country gentleman. There is a beautiful grove in the grounds, and the house is richly furnished, besides being supplied with one of the best civil war libraries in existence. The ex-president's daughter, Miss Fanny Hayes, presided over the affairs of the household after the death of her mother.

LABOR DIFFERENCES.

Seven Hundred Men Walk Out of a Diamond Plate Glass Works.

KOKOMO, Ind., Jan. 18.—Seven hundred men are out at the Diamond plate glass works in this city through a difference between employees of the grinding and polishing halls and their employers. The men in these departments were asked to complete twelve benches each in ten hours, instead of eleven, as has been the rule heretofore.

The grinders refused to go to work, but it was believed the differences would be adjusted. Monday night a committee from the polishing department called on Superintendent Elliott, and on being informed that an extra bench would be required in this department, the polishers were also called out. This has caused a general shut-down of the mills. All the men are members of the glassworkers' union.

BERLIN, Jan. 18.—Seven deaths from choleraic disorders have occurred at the lunatic asylum at Halle, Prussian Saxony. The cause of the disorders has been traced to the impure water used at the asylum.

Found Dead in His Barn.

WINNAMAC, Ind., Jan. 18.—William Nolan, an old citizen of Francesville, was found dead in his barn yesterday. It is supposed the death was the result of heart disease.

TO SUSPEND PURCHASES OF SILVER.

Senator Sherman Introduces a Bill to Repeal One of His Own Acts.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—The anti-opposition bill, which has monopolized almost the whole time of the senate (after the morning hour) during the present session, and which is expected to reach its final vote this afternoon, was debated yesterday for nearly three hours, and then went over without action. Sweeping denunciations of the measure were made by Senators Hoar, Republican, of Massachusetts; Vest, Democrat, of Missouri; and Platt, Republican, of Connecticut, as being in utter contravention of the constitution of the United States and in violation of the rights of the states.

Mr. Platt yielded to many interruptions, and was therefore unable to finish his speech.

After the passage of several unimportant bills, and after a second installment of Mr. Peffer's argument in favor of a constitutional amendment limiting the presidential office to one term, the McGarrah bill was taken up and an argument in support of it was made by Mr. Wilson, Republican, of Iowa, and several others. Upon a vote being taken the measure received its death blow, the affirmative vote falling eight short of the constitutional majority.

Senator Sherman, from the finance committee, reported a bill to suspend silver purchases after Jan. 1, 1894, and allow national banks to issue circulating notes to the full value of bonds deposited. It was placed on the calendar. This, if passed, will repeal the Sherman act, which authorized the purchase by the treasury of 4,500,000 ounces of silver per month. The free silver men will fight the repeal by every means in their power.

The senate, at 5:10 p.m., went into executive session, and soon afterwards adjourned. The session of the house was an uninteresting one. Work was mapped out for the remainder of the week and for Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, but beyond this little was done. A few private measures were passed and a committee on the judiciary having, under a prior order, the right of way, called up some bills of secondary importance. The one of most public interest was that providing for the punishment of offenses by passengers on the high seas, which was passed. A bill providing for a court of appeals in the District of Columbia, went over without action.

TRAIN JUMPS THE TRACK.

Colored Waiter Killed and Six Other Persons Seriously Injured.

REVERE, Mass., Jan. 18.—A passenger train on the Santa Fe railroad jumped the track and went over the bank near the Des Moines river bridge yesterday. The sleepers and the dining car caught fire from overturned stoves and were burned. A waiter was killed and six passengers were injured.

The accident was caused by a broken rail at a point two miles west of this place, at 6:15 o'clock yesterday morning. The loss of rolling stock is very great. The Santa Fe officials had the injured removed to Fort Madison, twenty-two miles from the scene of the wreck, and there they are securing the best possible medical assistance.

The list of the killed and injured is as follows:

Killed: William Ross, waiter in dining car; residence unknown.

Injured: William Bell, first cook of the dining car.

Michael Abends, second cook of the dining car.

Warren M. Smith, third cook of the dining car.

James B. Jones, conductor dining car.

Albert Dempsey, dining car conductor.

R. M. Stevenson, waiter, dining car.

R. S. Phelps, flagman.

The wrecked train was the first section of the limited No. 3, in charge of Conductor Woodward and Engineer Furze. While running at a high rate of speed the defective rail was struck and the tank trucks jumped the track, followed by those of the baggage, parlor and dining cars. All the cars rolled over the embankment, and from the completeness of the wreck the wonder is that more were not killed.

Almost immediately after the cars piled up flames were soon licking up the light wood work of the dining car. Fire added to the horror of the scene, but fortunately the passengers who had escaped injury were enabled to work in rescuing the injured, and the flames merely burned the wreckage. The wounded were carefully attended until the second section of the train arrived, when all were placed aboard and taken to Fort Madison.

An Epidemic of Sore Eyes.

WINCHESTER, O., Jan. 18.—An epidemic of sore eyes is prevailing in this vicinity to such an extent that the situation is becoming alarming. The disease seems to be confined to children between the ages of six and fourteen years.

Coalbeds Discovered.

COLOGNE, Jan. 18.—Immense coalbeds have been discovered in the Eiffel mountains. The coal is very rich and superior to that found in the Sarawak districts. It is claimed that the beds are sufficient to supply West Germany for the next fifty years with fuel.

Struck by an Engine.

COLUMBUS, Ind., Jan. 18.—Ira McRae, a Panhandle section man, at DuPont, on the Madison branch, last night was struck by the engine of an extra freight and his leg broken in three places. It is thought his injuries will prove fatal.

ACCIDENT IN RUSSIA

An Entire Passenger Train Burned While Running.

A FEARFUL LOSS OF LIFE.

Forty-Nine Soldiers Burned to Death or Killed and Twenty Others Seriously Injured—The Engineer Guilty of Criminal Negligence for Not Stopping His Train Sooner.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 18.—A peculiar and fatal accident occurred yesterday on the line between Slatousk and Samara. A train composed of several cars loaded with recruits was running from Slatousk to Samara, when flames burst from the foremost car.

The train was going at full speed and the tongues of fire swept backward and in a few minutes all the cars were blazing.

The engineer for some unaccountable reason did not stop the train until he had run a considerable distance. In the meantime there was a scene of the wildest confusion in the cars.

The recruits, or at least as many of them as could, leaped from the windows and doors. Some of them landed uninjured in the heavy snow banks, while others who landed in the cleared track were killed.

Those who were unable to get out of the cars were burned to death, for the train was entirely consumed. Some of the men were terribly burned before they jumped.

When the confusion had somewhat subsided, the officer in charge of the recruits, who saved himself by jumping, called the roll of the men. It was found that forty-nine of them were dead and twenty terribly burned and otherwise injured.

A strict investigation will be held to determine the cause of the fire. It is supposed now that some of the men in the forward car were skylarking and upset the stove.

The draft caused by the on-rushing train caused the flames to spread with such great rapidity that nothing could be done to extinguish them.

It is claimed that the engineer was guilty of criminal negligence in not stopping the train as soon as he saw the fire. Had he done so, the loss of life would have been very small.

Forger Recomes a Fugitive.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 18.—John R. McFee, a well known young lawyer and a partner in the firm of Norton & McFee, is a fugitive from justice and a forger for a large amount, having used the name of his partner and of others to secure money which he lost at the gambling table. It is believed that the forgeries will reach nearly $10,000. It is believed that he is also short in his accounts with

WHATHER INDICATIONS.

Tennessee and Kentucky, Snow; colder; southerly, shifting to northwesterly winds.

"He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord." Now is the time to subscribe to that relief fund.

The Sunday Morning Call voices the general sentiment in this community, we believe, when it says: "Our Senator and Representative should sit down on the proposed charter for cities of our class—the masses are foreinist it by an overwhelmingly large majority. The people should have some say as to who should serve them as city officials—the proposed charter gives Council, you might say, all the power. Down with it."

If editors and others who delight in denouncing Rev. Sam Jones as a "sham" were doing one tenth as much good in this world as he is doing, they might have some excuse for talking as they do. Mr. Jones' preaching at Hopkinsville resulted in 110 conversions in fourteen days, over $3,000 was raised for various purposes, and the Independent says that Germans and other once-popular social diversions are now matters of history, the majority of the young people having resolved, as a result of the revival, to give up dancing.

Mrs. E. M. Davis, of the Recor'ville neighborhood, who was stricken with paralysis a few days since, is recovering. She was able to be set up at last accounts. Her daughter, Mrs. L. W. Galbraith, is still with her.

Mr. Charles Maltby, after twelve years' service with the well-known firm of W. B. Carpenter & Co., of Cincinnati, has gone to Cleveland, O., where he will engage in business. His associates presented him with an elegant gold watch as a token of their esteem. Mr. Maltby is a brother of Mrs. Henry E. Pogue, of the West End.

The Lancaster Record-Homestead suggests that the turkey business in Central Kentucky is big enough to repay closer attention to breeding for weight. We note as an evidence of what can be accomplished in this line, a flock of 24 head, raised in Anderson County, that weighed 414 pounds gross. A yearling gobbler tipped the beam at 37 pounds gross, and 31 net.

Miss Emily Deatley died Monday night at the home of Mr. Alex. Pollitt near Tollesboro, in the seventy-second year of her age. She had been a member of the Baptist church all her life. Deceased had many friends in this city who will regret to learn of her death. Owing to the inclement weather the remains will be placed in the vault at the cemetery to await interment. Due notice of the funeral will be given.

Dr. N. A. Keys, of Kansas City, Mo., and Miss Kate Cameron, of Princeton, Ky., aged respectively 62 and 54 years, were married last week under very romantic circumstances, brought about by a mutual friend. They had never seen each other until they met one week before marriage and were drawn together by their peculiar belief of sanctification. In her excess of joy over the event and her continued prayer of thanks that God sent her a husband, the bride of a few days became a lunatic, pronounced so by physicians. Miss Cameron was a very estimable lady and well off in this world's goods.

The Cincinnati Commercial Gazette says: "Captain A. C. Respass, ex-postmaster of Maysville, Ky., but now a traveling whisky agent, was in the city Monday on business, but as a prominent Kentucky Democrat can not resist the impulse to say a few things on politics, so he predicted: 'Colonel Lindsay will be the successor of Carlisle in the U. S. Senate, and he ought to be, as he is the brainiest, best man we have had for the place since the death of Beck.' Captain Respass says he is not a candidate for postmaster again, and is taking no hand in the contest. There are three active candidates for it. One is T. J. Chenoweth, a druggist, and all-the-time Democrat. Robert Lovel, a grocer, is another applicant, and the one who is doing the most hustling is M. F. Marsh, editor of the Maysville BULLETIN. One thing in favor of Marsh is that he has always been a firm and persistent believer in Grover Cleveland. Congressman T. H. Paynter will name the man, and the contest for Paynter's endorsement will be a lively one from the start. The office pays $2,500 a year."

WINTER HOG PACKING.

Probabilities That the Decrease for the Season Will be Twenty-six Percent.

In its regular January report the Cincinnati Price Current says: "Our returns represent points which handled 93 per cent. of the hogs packed last winter in the West, and the remaining points are partially covered by recent information. Thus we have a fairly accurate representation of the comparative packing from November 1 to date. It is to be remarked, however, that in various instances these returns have not been accompanied with estimates for the remainder of the season, a feature which is an essential one in this particular inquiry. In these instances we have supplied the deficiency with such figures as a careful survey of all the information available seems to justify. With reference to the larger centers we have had quite an extensive correspondence, and it is interesting to note that a wider range of estimates has been received from various points in the West than from Chicago, where the expectation is that the January and February receipts of hogs will not greatly vary from 1,100,000, which compare with 1,653,000 last year.

The returns now received confirm the approximate accuracy of the weekly estimates previously for points from which reports were not regularly received. With careful survey of probabilities concerning the limited portion from which definite information is not now available the indicated total packing since November 1 is 3,080,000 hogs, compared with 5,210,000 a year ago, making a deficiency of 2,130,000. This exhibit implies that the season thus far has fallen 41 per cent. below the number of hogs handled in corresponding time last year.

"This rate of decrease is not reflected in the estimates for the remaining portion of the winter, but the shortage will continue of striking proportions. As near as we can interpret the available information it does not justify the view that the total for the four months ending March 1 will be more than approximately 5,000,000 hogs, compared with last season's total of 7,761,000. This implies about 25 per cent. decrease for the remaining portion of the season, and about 26 per cent. decrease in number for the entire four months.

"The total packing the past week has been approximately 290,000 hogs, compared with 240,000 the previous week, and 580,000 for corresponding time last year. The Western packing last season for the remaining portion of the season was 2,550,000 hogs, and there is no indication now that it will exceed 2,000,000 for this period this season.

"The hog market has been sharply advanced the past week, closing somewhat below the extreme point reached, but averaging about 55 cents per 100 pounds higher than a week ago, the general average for Western markets now being about $7.35 per 100 pounds, with outside figures ranging up to $7.60 and $7.85.

An Interesting Revival at Dover. Rev. T. W. Barker, formerly pastor of Eleventh Street M. E. Church of Covington, but now pastor of the M. E. Church, South, at Warsaw, Ky., is conducting a very interesting meeting at the M. E. Church, South, at Dover. Morning and evening services have been held for the past two weeks, and have so far resulted in twelve accessions to the church.

Rev. Barker, besides being an eminent and successful evangelist, is a thorough musician, and during his labors at Dover has been assisted by one of the best choirs in the State. The addition of the flute, cornet and trombone to the regular choir and organ have discoursed the sacred melodies with inspiring grandeur. Rev. Barker is a logical and impressive speaker, has endeared himself to the people of Dover by his many natural social qualifications and his departure at the close of the meeting will cause sincere regret.

A Maysville Negro in Trouble. A telegram from Huntington says: "George E. W. Seiner, a young colored man from Maysville, employed at the Carrollton Hotel, got offended because he was refused the loan of a quarter, and securing a big revolver started to assassinate some one. He met Proprietor Dick Goodwin in the dining room, and the latter jumped on the fellow. After a desperate encounter Goodwin got the gun away from Seiner. The would-be shivelist was then arrested."

World's Fair Bill Passed. The State Senate passed the World's Fair bill yesterday afternoon by a vote of 21 to 9. It had previously passed the House and will now go to the Governor for his approval. Kentucky will be properly represented at the World's Columbian Fair, as the bill appropriates $100,000 for an exhibit of the State's resources.

THE MARKETS.

LOUISVILLE TOBACCO MARKET.

Furnished by Glover & Durrett, Louisville Tobacco Warehouse.

Sales on our market for the week just closed amount to 3,210 hds., with receipts for the same period of 2,722 hds. Sales on our market since January 1st, amount to 5,934 hds. Sales of the crop of 1892 on our market to this date amount to 16,626 hds.

The receipts and sales of the new burley crop have been large again this week. The market has been very active throughout this week with some advance in prices on the common and medium grades; the better grades of new burley reached as high as $21 per hundred during the week. ## "PROFESSOR" GRANGER.

The Bourbon News Gives Away the "Mind-Reader's" Wonderful Performances.

"Professor" Granger, who advertised himself as a wonderful mind-reader, mesmerist, &c., gave a "performance" at the opera house yesterday afternoon and again last night. He had a $14 house last night and a $6 house in the afternoon.

The BULLETIN hears this morning that the "Professor" is the same individual who was run out of Russell Hall at Augusta last Friday night. He had to jump through a back window to escape from the crowd he had victimized. At least that's what a special from there to one of the Cincinnati papers claimed.

The Professor was also at Paris some days ago, and a marked copy of the Bourbon News received yesterday afternoon pronounces his show "a fake of the first water." The News says:

"The Professor's first "trick" was to swing a table, which was supposed to adhere to his hand because of the electricity in his body. One of the stage men told the News that there was a strap fastened on top of the table, and that the Professor had his hand under this. The next trick was a difficult (?) feat of mind-reading. Slips of paper and envelopes were distributed through the audience to have questions and names written thereon. A confederate then gathered the queries, and in passing through the stage door was hid from view a moment, when he "switched" the envelopes, handing the Professor blanks which he destroyed. The original queries were by this time written on a blackboard placed in the wings of the stage, where it was an easy thing for the Professor to read the minds of skeptics. It is dead easy when you know how. He next held a seance and patted the boys on the head with his hands which were covered with a cloth and supposed to be held by the boys who assisted him. He told them to look "scared" when he hit them. Then came a table trick, where the table floated in the air. It did not have wings, nor was it moved by spiritualistic hands. The Professor and confederate each wore a belt which was hooked to the table.

"The audience was next entertained with feats of mesmerism. The boys whom the Professor "fixed" were well trained and amusing. Those whom he failed to "fix" by whispering "act right—there's money in it," he sent off the stage. This act concluded the performance, and a badly-sold audience tried to get home without anyone knowing where they had been."

BIG FIRE IN CHICAGO.

The Calumet Club House Entirely Destroyed.

A GIRL PERISHES IN THE FLAMES

The Clerk of the Club Overcome with Excitement and Dies of Heart Disease. Many Valuable Paintings Destroyed.

The Loss Will Reach $300,000—Other Fire Losses.

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—The beautiful home of the Calumet club at Twentieth and Michigan avenue, was totally destroyed by fire last night about 6 o'clock, and it is feared that one life was lost. Nothing now remains of the splendid edifice except jagged brick walls rising at some points as high as the fifth story and at others having caved in nearly to the level of the sidewalk.

So sudden was the fire in its progress that scarcely any of the effects of the club were saved. Not one of the many beautiful paintings which adorned its walls was taken from the building. The twenty-odd members of the club who resided there lost all their personal property, and some of them were forced to leave the building in a very hurried manner.

It is estimated that the loss, including that of the many valuable pictures and other furniture of the elegant house, will reach $300,000, with $250,000 insurance.

The fire was discovered by one of the employees of the house in Room 12, which was unoccupied and was undergoing repairs. Carpenters had been at work there all day, and it is supposed that the fire started in some shavings they had left. The alarm was given, and several members of the club, who were in the reception room at the time, at once gave their attention to rescuing some of the valuable pictures, but so quick was the spread of the flames and so dense the smoke that preceded them that they were forced to give up the attempt and flee for their lives.

The greatest excitement was occasioned among the servants, sixteen of whom roomed on the fifth floor. Two of the girls, Kittie McCabe and Maggie Devitt, were ill, and in consequence were in bed when the alarm was given. The girls attempted to dress, but the flames drove them out, and in the dense smoke they tried to grope their way down the stairs. Miss Devitt was painfully burned about the hands and face, and when she reached the ground floor, clad only in her night dress, her face was almost black from smoke.

Her companion, Miss McCabe, was not seen by any one and it is feared that she failed to reach the ground in safety. Miss Devitt said of her at the hospital last night: "Kittie was unable to dress, but started after me down the stairway. I looked back several times and called for her to come on, but the last time she seemed to be enveloped in flames, and that was the last I saw of her."

The firemen responded to the call, but so rapid was the progress of the flames that they were beyond control in a few moments of their discovery, and scarcely had the last inmate left the building when the walls began to crumble. Half an hour later nothing but a heap of smoking ruins remained.

Among the valuable works of art, the loss of which the club now mourns, was the noted painting "Peacemakers," by G. P. A. Healey. There was also a portrait of General Grant by Thomas Leclair. This was the last portrait of General Grant which was painted, and was accounted very valuable.

A sad fatality connected with the fire was the death of Mr. R. R. Redfield, for a year and a half the clerk of the club. Mr. Redfield was overcome by excitement, as he left the club and sank down exhausted in front of 2003 Indiana avenue as he was proceeding to his home. A citizen who happened along at that moment assisted him into the house. A physician was summoned, but Mr. Redfield expired within half an hour. He was subject to heart disease, and it is supposed that the excitement attendant upon the fire brought on the attack.

CIGARETTE FACTORY BURNED. It Was the Confederate "Soldiers Home" During the War.

RICHMOND, Jan. 18.—Fire broke out yesterday morning about 5:30 o'clock in the cigarette factory of Allen & Ginter, a branch of the American Tobacco company, situated at the corner of Seventh and Carey streets. The weather was intensely cold. Owing to the combustible nature of the building and its contents, which consisted of ground tobacco, paper and paper boxes, the flames spread with frightful rapidity, and communicated to Valentine's meat juice works and completely gutted the interior, leaving the walls alone standing. The origin of the fire is not yet known.

The factory of Allen & Ginter was a four-story brick building, and will be remembered by many old Confederate soldiers as "soldiers' home" during the war. The building was owned by Dr. W. D. Thomas, and was insured for $10,000. Allen & Ginter's loss is estimated at $175,000; insurance, $168,000. Valentine's meat juice works' loss is about $60,000; fully covered by insurance. Messrs. Ginter and John Pope, members of the Allen & Ginter company, have between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000 worth of securities in the safe in the debris of the burned building.

Total insurance $85,000. The losses will considerably exceed this amount.

An Overheated Stove.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 18.—The four-story brick building at 931 and 938 Arch street was damaged by fire last night to the extent of $25,000. The building was owned and occupied by R. H.
